STAT 27. A new line item of [redacted] is requested to make incentive awards to members of the Senior Intelligence Service. These awards could apparently total

STAT as much as [redacted] per person. This means that when the bonus is combined with their base salaries, certain CIA employees could earn more than Congressmen. Do you agree with this analysis? In a time of budgetary stringency, isn't this a "nice-to-have" item that could be deferred until more prosperous times?
